

The Financial Freedom Pledge. My Personal Declaration Of Independence.

I pledge a commitment to become financially free. I know that financial freedom is not something others can give me, nor is it something that the government or the economy can provide me. Rather, financial freedom is something I insist upon achieving.

I understand that financial freedom is not determined by luck, chance, race, creed, color or religion but is dependent upon my own hard work, creativity, follow-through and persistence.

I will make informed financial decisions, understanding the difference between short-term wants and needs, and how these relate to my ultimate goal of financial freedom.

I will dissolve the bands which hold me back from living a life of financial freedom. I will refuse to create accommodations for myself, that give up my rights and personal power with money.

I will be aware of the effects of other people's opinion and advertising on the financial decisions I make, and resolve not to be influenced by them. I won't accede my authority or knowledge about what's right for me financially to anyone or anything.

I won't refuse myself the power to make financial decisions that I have the right to make. I won't obstruct what is true about money through ignorance, prejudices or through inaction and laziness.

I will take care of my finances today by tracking expenses and creating a budget that is realistic and one that gets to me to my goal of financial freedom.

I have quartered the spending enemy in my mind. I won't give my money power away to urgency and false importance and things that don't align with my financial priorities. I will take care of my finances tomorrow by saving for my future.

I won't put aside that which I have decided to be the most important goal in my life. I will continue my personal education about personal finance, investing and wealth for the rest of my life.

I won't constrain myself with false fears and false limitations that deprive me of that which I can create for my well-being and my satisfaction in life.

I refuse to not have financial freedom. I refuse to quit prior to achieving it. I will claim my right to financial freedom.

It is now necessary to fully assert my rights to financial freedom and to insist that they be honored. I, therefore, do, in the Name, and by Authority of myself, solemnly publish and declare, that I am absolved from all allegiance to old, unsuccessful ways regarding money and do hereby dissolve all connection to them. And I do declare that I have full power to achieve financial freedom and a life of my choosing and to commit to doing that which I have a full right to do. I will achieve financial freedom.
